

Learn more about Japanese painted scrolls, screens and woodblock prints by clicking on the links below.

Japanese woodblock prints

Read about Auckland Art Gallery's own collection of Japanese woodblock prints in Fragile Beauty: Historic Japanese Graphic Art (2013), by Matthew Norman, Lawrence E Marceau and Doris de Pont.

Japanese scroll paintings (kakejiku)

Watch Timothy Clark, former curator Asian Art, as he talks about the British Museum's version of Kitagawa Utamaro's Beauty Reading a Letter.

Learn how museum curators handle hanging scrolls safely.

Watch a scroll (kakejiku) being hung in a traditional alcove in a Japanese house (tokonoma).

See how hanging scrolls (kakejiku) are made.

Watch a demonstration of black ink (sumi-e) scroll, by Shozo Sato, Professor Emeritus of the College of Art and Design at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

Japanese painted screens (byobu)

Learn about what's involved in designing Japanese interiors in this 1992 video from the Art of Asia interactive media programme at the Minneapolis Institute of Art.